ANOTHER YEAR OF THE WOMAN: Sabrina Carpenter rides her smash hit "Espresso" to the top of the charts and to the stage of the MTV Video Music Awards at UBS Arena on Sept. 11, 2024, in Belmont, New York.

YEAR END SPECIAL ISSUE 2024

Women Again Make Their Marks On The Charts

By DEBORAH SPEER

Women continued to make gains at the box office in 2024, including many not named Taylor, Beyoncé or P!NK. While veteran stars like Madonna, Nicki Minaj and Janet Jackson also mounted top tours and landed in the upper reaches of the chart, there was a slew of newer talent earning positions on Pollstar's Top 200 Worldwide Tours chart in 2024, as well.

While three women (Taylor Swift, P!NK and Madonna) occupied slots in the top 10 tours, Karol G (11) and Olivia Rodrigo (22) were not far behind. And high-profile newcomers like Melanie Martinez (59), Charli XCX (124), and Sabrina Carpenter (184) joined them on the Top 200 Worldwide Tours for the first time.

It's a substantial improvement from not so long ago, when no women appeared in the top 10 of 2021 Top 100 Worldwide chart (the highest-ranking woman was Alanis Morissette at No. 16); and only four others made the cut: Lady Gaga (39); Lauren Daigle (45); Gwen Stefani (84) and female-fronted Little Big Town (94).

Karol G just missed the top 10 at No. 11 with her stadium tour grossing $165,986,682 from 1,520,844 tickets over 47 concerts. She isn't just one of the top touring women, she's also the third-highest-ranking Latin artist, behind only Luis Miguel and Bad Bunny. She's consistently in Pollstar's year-end rankings, finishing at No. 14 in 2023 and No. 17 in 2022.

Rounding out 2024's top 25 is one of live's brightest newcomers: Olivia Rodrigo, with $127,104,981 grossed and 979,161 tickets sold off 67 shows from her "GUTS World Tour" – which pulled a sort of double-duty by introducing her sizable audience to support artist Chappell Roan, who blew up in 2024 and is certain to be a mainstay of future charts.

And Roan won't be alone. A number of women have begun to loudly ring box office cash registers, including Sabrina Carpenter and Charli XCX – not all necessarily total newcomers to touring but gaining momentum as live performers with exciting futures.

Roan's box office numbers from 2023 into the first half of 2024, while certainly respectable with mostly sold-out, per-show averages at clubs and theaters of 2,914 tickets sold and $110,536 gross sales, didn't prepare promoters for massive crowds she drew at Lollapalooza, Bonnaroo and Austin City Limits – all of which experienced what were believed to be stage records when she performed.

A recalibration of expectations might be in order for the Midwest Princess in 2025, but as Lollapalooza's social media accounts posted after her Aug. 1 appearance in Chicago, "It's Chappell's world and we're just living in it."

Sabrina Carpenter's 2024 chart gross of $13,206,792 with 109,800 tickets sold as reported to Pollstar landed her on the Top 200 Worldwide Tours chart for the first time, though she initially made a splash in 2017 as an 18-year-old crossover star from the Disney career incubator. Carpenter returned to the charts in a big way, riding the success of her "Espresso" hit single to the top of the 2024 Outside Lands bill on late notice when Tyler, the Creator had to drop off the lineup in August. She opened for the Latin American, Australian and Asian legs of Taylor Swift's "Eras Tour" and quickly amassed more than 80 million monthly listeners on Spotify.

Having started the year on the iHeart Radio "Jingle Ball" tour, followed by the support run for Swift and festival appearances including Coachella, Carpenter effectively began her "Short n' Sweet" North American arena tour at Outside Lands. In 2025, Carpenter will continue the run with a massive European arena tour.

And while Charli XCX has yet to appear on Pollstar's year-end top tours charts, her "Brat 2024 Arena Tour" of mostly sold-out arenas included two sold-out shows Oct. 15-16 at Kia Forum in Inglewood, California, selling 29,548 tickets for a gate of $3,193,958. The tour's success sets the stage for her "Brat 2025 Arena Tour," which is set to go deep into next year.

GONE COUNTRY: Post Malone, shown performing before the Super Bowl in February, more than dabbled in country music this year, releasing the F-1 Trillion album and playing country-only sets at major music festivals. YEAR END SPECIAL ISSUE 2024

Cowboys Up: New Headliners, Crossovers and Mainstream Appeal Put Country Music Back On Top

By RYAN BORBA

Trends move fast in popular culture, and those who haven't had time to stop and smell the roses may forget that country music a decade or two ago was where popstars honed their craft before taking off the training wheels and going full pop.

These days, rather than Taylor Swift and Miley Cyrus trading in their cowboy hats and boots, it's the other way around. There's no better example than former soundcloud rapper Post Malone. The face-tattoo-covered artist made his bones as a hip-hop hitmaker, whose penchant for catchy melodies and pleasant vocal stylings worked in contemporary festival settings, putting him on some of the biggest stages in the world.

A Texas boy at heart and talented multi-instrumentalist, Post Malone's dabblings in country music were more than cosplay, leading to a full — and acclaimed — country music album spawning even more hits, a country-specific headlining set at the multi-genre Outside Lands festival in San Francisco and full "Big Ass Stadium Tour" set for 2025 with fellow country upstart Jelly Roll, a similarly sized rapid ascent to the top of the country music world.

More and more, the words "contemporary" and "country" are finding themselves in the same sentences when discussing tour packages and festival lineups.

"I love what Post Malone and Jelly are doing. It feels very 2025 to me," said Jonathan Shank of Terrapin Station Entertainment, whose sports division books and consults for more than 15 stadiums in the United States. "I love the genre bending, I love the contemporary feel of it."

And, although off-cycle tour-wise, Beyoncé's own country album, Cowboy Carter, racked up 11 Grammy nominations, making it the most nominated solo album of Queen Bey's career. And with the track "Texas Hold 'Em," the R&B/pop icon became the first Black woman with a No. 1 single on the Hot Country Songs chart. She explained that her decision to take on the genre was "born out of an experience that I had years ago where I did not feel welcomed," which led her to a deep dive into the history of Black artists' contributions to country.

Zach Bryan, No. 8 on Pollstar's Year End Top Worldwide Tours chart, sees as much of an overnight success as can be remembered in recent years, smashing attendance records at arena across the United States and topping festival lineups — including headlining an Americana-leaning Bourbon and Beyond festival in Louisville in September that saw 60,000 people in attendance, breaking records for the event. Already set to headline Stagecoach in 2025, Bryan is now slated to play a special one-off at Golden Gate Park in San Francisco, a city not exactly known as a bastion for popular country music. With headline grosses resembling blockbuster pop tours, Bryan — much like Morgan Wallen last year — has proven that country music can hang with the big boys and girls.

Speaking of, Lainey Wilson has become a household name after nearly a decade marinating as the next big thing in bellbottoms — her own hit single may have said it best, "Country's Cool Again." Wilson became the first female CMA Entertainer of the Year since 2011 (back when Taylor Swift was still county) and, after years of smaller gigs and strong support slots, is now solidly headlining arenas and grossing into the $1 million mark.

"Contemporary Western Rock and Roll is what I like to call this genre," said Bruce Kalmick, an artist manager and festival producer at WHY&HOW Ventures, whose debut Cattle Country festival in rural Texas this April was headlined by Eric Church. "That's become the biggest genre in the world. Your Lollapaloozas and ACLs of the world, from what I see, are starting to incorporate more of the contemporary western rock and roll, more Americana. That's what the people want."

WIth 2025 already shaping up as a strong country year, the only question may be whether Taylor or Miley go country again.

Weather & Low Ticket Sales & Onstage Altercations, Oh My!

By SARAH PITTMAN

Cancelled. It's arguably the saddest word in the concert business.

Some cancellations in 2024 were unavoidable, such as tour dates called off because of ailments. Of note, Childish Gambino's first headline tour in five years was cancelled in early October in the middle of the trek with the rapper/actor/comedian announcing he had to undergo surgery.

Cancellations due to weather included a severe rainstorm leading Miami's Ultra Music Festival to cancel day one of the March event mid-show.

In early September, as many regions of California endured a persistent heat wave, the Hollywood Bowl was among thousands of customers who lost power in Los Angeles – forcing KCRW Festival to cancel less than an hour before showtime.

Later that month, Hurricane Helene brought about concert cancellations and wrecked venues across the Southeast including destroying Salvage Station, an indoor-outdoor concert complex in Asheville, North Carolina, that focused on the jam band scene.

With severe weather, being intensified by climate change, continuing to affect our daily lives at an increasing rate, those in the music business would be wise to expect the unexpected and be sure they have good insurance policies in place.

"Weather has always been a consideration for outdoor events and has always been part of the cancellation insurance product; perhaps more focus has been put on it in recent times due to the unpredictability of the weather, and loss of events due to weather. Losses have resulted in a change in the terms offered within the insurance product and, of course, the pricing, putting more focus on this element of the cover," Charlie Connell, head of entertainment at Howden Group, told Pollstar earlier this year.

Along with the weather, sometimes ticket sales can be hard to predict. Four months before The Black Keys' "International Players Tour" was set to start, the band announced it was canceling the arena trek with the promise of a more "intimate" routing.

On the flip side, the North American leg of Shakira's "Las Mujeres Ya No Lloran World Tour," which was supposed to visit arenas in fall 2024, was called off just a few weeks ahead of the scheduled launch because she upgraded the venues to stadiums in 2025.

And then there were the oddball cancellations, from Tenacious D canceling the rest of its tour after guitarist Kyle Gass made a joke about the assassination attempt on former President Donald Trump to Jane's Addiction halting its tour after singer Perry Farrell and his bandmates got in a physical altercation on stage at Boston's Leader Bank Pavilion.

The live biz also endured a ton of festival cancellations across the globe including Desert Daze, scheduled for Oct. 10-13 in Lake Perris, California, with organizers blaming "rising production costs and the current volatile festival market." In the last few weeks Bésame Mucho, set for Dec. 21 in Los Angeles, and Sick New World, scheduled for April 2025 in Las Vegas, were also called off. Some fans pointed fingers at the single-day events' high ticket costs.

In August, the UK's Association of Independent Festivals (AIF) announced that 60 of the country's festivals have now announced a postponement, cancellation or complete closure in 2024. Over in Australia, Splendour In The Grass made a shocking announcement in March that its July event, with exclusive performances from Kylie Minogue and Future, would not be happening.

Australian Festival Association managing director Mitch Wilson called the news "devastating" and commented, "In the 18-25-year demographic demand for tickets in this key age group has decreased when compared to the same age group prior to the pandemic."

With Warped Tour's return set for 2025, founder Kevin Lyman told Pollstar it was important to keep ticket prices low and to encourage young people to go to festivals: "We need to pay attention to a segment of the population that just can't take any more credit card debt."

YEAR END SPECIAL ISSUE 2024

Un Año Bonito: Latin Artists Raise The Bar, Buoy Live Biz In 2025

By OSCAR ARÉLIZ

The year for the live entertainment industry may not have been as record-breaking as 2023, but it was one filled with milestones for many artists, especially those in the Latin music space, sparking hope for growth in 2025.

Twenty-five tours from Latin artists cracked Pollstar's Year End Worldwide Top 200, which is seven fewer than the number of acts that made the cut in 2023. Though that figure may seem discouraging, the achievements from high-ranking artists and a growing interest in subgenres under the Latin music umbrella are enough to look ahead with some optimism.

Just look at Karol G's "Mañana Será Bonito Tour." The Colombian superstar made a bold leap into stadiums in 2023 and was No. 11 on the Top 200 Worldwide Tours chart, grossing $165,986,682 off 1,520,844 tickets. She wrapped up her remarkable run with four sold-out concerts at Santiago Bernabéu Stadium in Madrid, Spain, something no artist has ever done.

"Watching Karol G sell out four shows in Madrid, culminating her European run, was a milestone not just for her but for Latin music as a whole," Hans Schafer, SVP of global touring, told Pollstar. "It's incredibly fulfilling to know you've played a role in facilitating an artist's dream. But the real credit goes to Karol and her team. She's built an empire through authenticity, creativity and an unrelenting work ethic."

Karol G's tour is proof of Latin music's influence transcending genre and geography, Schafer adds, as well as the success of artists like Bad Bunny, Aventura, Carin León, Fuerza Regida, Feid, Peso Pluma and Don Omar.

"What's exciting is the demand for these artists in non-Spanish-speaking regions," Schafer said. "Latin touring has become a global force, and I expect to see more artists exploring new markets while continuing to dominate in their traditional strongholds."

Not all stars have such demand, however, making 2024 a year that brought many in the business "back to reality," as music exec Nelson Albareda put it. The CEO of independent Latin music promoter Loud And Live said promoters, agents and managers had to put in extra work this year to make a tour successful because of ticket prices.

"We saw concerts and ticket sales return to basically normal, pre-pandemic levels versus a craziness that we experienced in 2023," Albareda said. "We had a good year, but we saw people waiting until the end to buy tickets. ... That has made us change the strategy of where we spend the money in the media."

Despite those challenges, there's much to look forward to when it comes to Latin music. Artists from Mexico shared much of the spotlight this year with superstars like Bad Bunny and Karol G, but other subgenres are creeping their way into the mainstream. Henry Cárdenas, president and CEO of Cárdenas Marketing Network, told Pollstar that Mexican artists are selling a lot more in other Latin American countries like the Dominican Republic, Guatemala and Colombia, which was uncommon a decade ago, an indication of a crossover of cultures.

The fusion of music is what helped Mexican artists expand into other regions, and Albareda believes that experimentation will take Latin music to even greater heights.

"What we are seeing is that Latin music definitely is going through a change where you're seeing more tropical sounds, whether it be salsa or merengue," Albareda said. "We work with Camilo, and he came out with a salsa album, and now you see kids dancing to salsa. Rauw Alejandro isn't our artist but he's a huge sensation, and his [new] album is tropical. We're going to see a transformation once again, another cycle where you're going to have see fusions of pop, urban and tropical."

With those artists already experimenting with such sounds, the future seems to already be here, and as the music evolves, so does the business. The live Latin music industry won't have Bad Bunny, Karol G and Luis Miguel to carry the genre this year, and it will be up to a diverse group of artists from all generations, like Shakira and newcomers Latin Mafia and CA7RIEL & Paco Amoroso, to keep the momentum going.

RECORD SETTERS: Taylor Swift and Ed Sheeran, two of the hottest tickets in the world right now, arm in arm at Wembley Stadium, where Taylor Swift's "The Eras Tour" stopped for a total of eight nights this summer. Sheeran came out during Swift's Aug. 15 performance.

YEAR END SPECIAL ISSUE 2024

Blockbuster Tours, Boutique Festivals & A Bespoke Pop-Up Amphitheater: The International Business Has It All

By GIDEON GOTTFRIED

This has been another year of massive business, but one figure outshines them all: $2 billion, the mark Taylor Swift broke on "The Eras Tour," which wrapped at Vancouver's B.C. Place Stadium, Dec. 8, setting a new all-time touring record for overall gross, as well as the 10 million-plus tickets that generated it. A substantial amount of that business was done internationally, including eight performances at London's Wembley Stadium, where Swift equalled a record Take That have been holding for 13 years. Ed Sheeran joined her on stage for one of those shows, incidentally an artist who once broke a former all-time touring record himself. Just like "Eras," Sheeran's current "Mathematics" tour has been setting attendance records in many cities. He, for instance, performed for two consecutive nights at the newly renovated Darius and Girėnas Stadium in Kaunas, Lithuania, Aug. 3-4, setting a new ticket sales record in the Baltic states for a show by an international artist on 81,118 tickets sold at a $8,652,692 gross, according to the box office report submitted to Pollstar. Or the two sold-out shows at The Sevens Stadium in Dubai, Jan. 19-20, moving 58,707 tickets ($10,579,734 gross) – the best-selling concerts in UAE history. Sheeran's tour is ongoing, scheduled to wrap in September next year.

"Having the stars align like they did and for them both to perform together at Wembley was an incredible and emotional moment," Simon Jones at AEG Presents, international promoter for both these stand-out artists, wrote on his socials.

As Pollstar's year-end charts show, there's also healthy business to be made at the arena level. It's the grassroots sector, where all the above mentioned talent, including the crews that put together these shows, learned and honed their craft. And, as Pollstar's reporting across 2024 shows, the grassroots sector is struggling. But help is coming, with the UK leading the way: Coldplay pledged to donate 10% of their 2025 UK ticket income to grassroots venues; Katy Perry pledged to donate £1 per ticket sold on her UK dates next year. The country's new Labour government has mandated that the UK industry come up with a ticket levy system, whereby revenues from the blockbuster shows would be injected into the grassroots economy.

Small businesses are endangered in the current economy: 70 independent festival cancellations or outright closures in 2024 in the UK alone prove it. Which is why the launch of Found Festival in 2025, a new boutique, family-oriented event in Buckingham, England, with a capacity of 2,000, is encouraging – especially because its founders had to put a stop to another event, Towersey Festival, after 60 years, celebrating its very last edition Aug. 23-26.

One event in Europe this year combined both massive scale and a boutique approach: Adele's 10-night Munich residency in Germany in August. A team of this industry's finest brought to life a 76,000-capacity pop-up amphitheater made to measure for a single artist, surrounded by an Adele-themed adventure park full of surprises for any real fan. From the show's design, its stage, including a 200-meter wide LED wall, the impeccable audio to the financing of this nine-figure undertaking: the sheer effort it took, and the brilliant result the audience was treated to, are probably best summed up by Live Nation GSA CEO Marek Lieberberg, who directed this production symphony, and spoke of a "once in a lifetime achievement, a true milestone in music history."

Another instrumental partner involved in this feat, Adele's production manager Paul English, was also over the moon about this project, describing it as a career-high. But he also spoke of the divide between this industry's top and bottom as maybe the biggest challenge to overcome. "I hope that gap closes between the small and the big," he said, "support is required for the smaller venues, because that's where we came from."

Shaky Knees: The Festival Market's Volatile Year

By ANDY GENSLER

2024 started out with no greater symbol of a softening festival market than Coachella. Long the U.S. festival market's trailblazing megafest and a bellwether for the market, the Goldenvoice/AEG Presents confab in Indio, California not selling out both weekends didn't augur well for the year. In the not too distant past, Coachella had built up such brand equity that it would sell out before the lineup was even announced. This year's slower sales, some reasoned, were due to rising prices, an inflationary economy, a less-than-buzzy lineup (though headliners Lana Del Rey, Tyler, the Creator and Doja Cat are a sweet spot for many), competition from stadium tours and/or a glut of live music.

But Coachella was just the tip of 2024's softening festival market, which saw dozens — at least close to 90 — shutter for various reasons. This included Desert Daze, Electric Zoo, Firefly, Format Festival, Life Is Beautiful, Lollapalooza Paris & Stockholm, Lovers & Friends, Made In America, Nocturnal Wonderland, Okeechobee, The Peach Music Festival, Primavera Sounds in Asunción, Buenos Aires and São Paulo, Something In The Water, Wonderstruck and, just this month, Bésame Mucho, a Latin music fest set for Dodger Stadium with Shakira, Enrique Iglesias and Pitbull.

"Like everyone else, I see what's being reported and see a lot of events being canceled and I'm not completely sure what to attribute that to," says Ashley Capps, co-founder of Bonnaroo and director of Knoxville, Tennessee's critically acclaimed Big Ears Festival, which draws roughly 32,000 people over four days and curates a musically adventurous and omnivorous fest for fans who skew older. "Part of it, in my estimation, is just a matter of volume. I don't mean the number of festivals per se, although that's part of it, but the number of tours and the number of shows going on any given night, even in a town the size of Knoxville, is sometimes astonishing compared to what it was just a few years ago."

Others within the industry point out that for top artists, festivals, which can provide seven or eight figures for premier talent, don't have the appeal or payoffs they once did. "The bigger companies are buying tours," said Michael Berg, a festival owner, talent buyer and partner in events including the North Coast Music Festival in Chicago. He told Pollstar in June, "Because of the economic cost of firing up the engine, it's easier for a band to take a tour deal, go out, live on a bus and go city to city rather than fire up the machine and do just one festival. It's just way more expensive. ...It's definitely harder to get artists to commit to festivals right now and then also to try to make a festival lineup that's unique and not like every other homogenized one out there."

Still, Outside Lands, San Francisco's independently owned megafest, was one of 2024's bright spots. "This year's festival was a great success," Another Planet's Allen Scott told Pollstar in August. "At one point, six of the top 10 songs in the world were by Outside Lands artists: Post Malone, Teddy Swims, Chappell Roan, Sabrina Carpenter (two songs) and Shaboozey. We expanded the type of artists we can book at Outside Lands. We've always had an open playbook in terms of what we book — rock, electronic, heritage artists, Latin, roots, pop music, hip-hop, jazz. It's a diverse audience that comes to Outside Lands and it's reflective of the San Francisco Bay Area."

"There's a lot going on out there that feels cookie cutter," says Capps, who also noted the success of this year's Stagecoach Festival, Goldenvoice/AEG's country fest, saying it was, "very creatively programmed." He also discussed the complexity of putting on a festival today. "There's a lot of dynamics at play, and some of them may be generational," he said. "Different generations have different mindsets and ideas about what they want from these immersive experiences."

Live Events Industry Puts Sustainability Initiatives Center Stage In 2024

By WENDY PEARL and GIDEON GOTTFRIED

Turns out that thinking green is good for the world and business. As climate change concerns rise, prioritizing sustainability at venues reduces the impact on the environment and attracts eco-conscious tours and appeals to like-minded consumers. A commitment to sustainability can give a venue a competitive edge.

Topping the green wish list at stadiums, arenas, amphitheaters and convention centers this year was reducing the venue's carbon footprint. Venues typically try to achieve carbon-neutral operation three ways: reduce energy consumption, minimize waste and encourage eco-friendly transportation.

Many venues are turning to renewable energy sources including natural and solar lighting, managing the operation of heating and cooling systems when they aren't in use, water conservation and opting for biodegradable or recyclable materials. They are encouraging the use of carpooling, shuttles and public transportation and collaborating with local vendors to further reduce transportation-related carbon emissions.

Building operators are finding that the initial investment in switching to LED lighting or installing paperless systems can lead to long-term savings through energy efficiency and waste reduction.

On the concourse, consumer engagement and education has become a focus with staff helping attendees navigate waste sorting systems. Venues are also incorporating more plant-based food options and themed beverages including offerings tied to Earth Day.

GOAL (Green Operations & Advanced Leadership), a network of climate-conscious organizations founded by Pollstar parent company Oak View Group, Fenway Sports Group, State Farm Arena and Jason F. McLennan, released its first Impact Report in 2024 detailing successful member initiatives and data-backed revenue growth opportunities.

Member venues had a 32 percent diversion rate for waste, which represented the combined weight of 60 times the Statue of Liberty kept out of the nation's landfills. GOAL offers a curated online library of vetted sustainability resources modeled after the industry-leading work at the Oak View Group owned-and-operated Climate Pledge Arena.

Another OVG building that's taking sustainability to the next level is Co-op Live in Manchester, England. The building has been designed without any gas supply serving the site. It will use electricity for everything, from air-source heat pumps for heating, cooling, and catering, to LED lighting used throughout. 10,500 square meters of rooftop solar panels will power day-to-day activity. The only fossil fuel used in the building relates to backup generators in case there's a power shortage, and the emergency generators, which are a regulatory requirement.

Artists taking on the climate crisis include Billie Eilish, whose "Hit Me Hard And Soft: The Tour" features plant-based food drives and menu options as part of a year-long partnership between GOAL and Support + Feed, which was founded in 2020 by Maggie Baird, mother of Eilish and her brother Finneas. The partnership aims to help mitigate the climate crisis and increase access to nourishing meals in local communities from Oct. 4-Dec. 17.

Coldplay is another act leading the charge on the ongoing "Music Of The Spheres World Tour," which ranks No. 2 on Pollstar's Year-End Top 200 Worldwide Tours chart. Coldplay announced in June it had met its goal of reducing direct carbon emissions from show production, freight, band, and crew travel by at least 50% compared to its previous stadium tour in 2016-2017.

Dave Matthews Band partnered with Live Nation-operated venues on their U.S. tour to minimize the shows' footprint to equally impressive results, including: over 90% of waste from fans on the tour was reused, composted, recycled or donated; the use of 150,000 plastic water bottles was avoided; over 100,000 pounds were diverted from the landfill; and 3,200 meals were donated to local community organizations.

Stand-up Elbows Into The Mainstream... And To The Center Of The Discourse

By J.R. LIND

The mainstreaming of stand-up comedy continued in 2024, shoving its way into the serious sides of the discourse.

A regular talking point during the Monday morning quarterbacking after Vice President Kamala Harris's election loss to former (and now-future) president Donald Trump was that Harris should have sat down with Joe Rogan.

Rogan — though now making his fortune as the host of the world's top podcast, he is a long-time stand-up comedian who also owns the Austin club Comedy Mothership — becoming a must-do in the way "60 Minutes" has been for decades is a testament to the reach comics now have. For what it's worth, Trump did appear on "The Joe Rogan Experience" and eschewed "60 Minutes."

Trump also swung by Theo Von's podcast and Andrew Schulz's. Tony Hinchcliffe — part of the Rogan extended universe, host of his own popular podcast "Kill Tony" and a Pollstar cover subject — made a widely-criticized joke about Puerto Rico at Trump's climactic Madison Square rally that pundits speculated might cost the Republican the election.

It's not just that political comedy was thriving. That's to be expected in an election year. It's that politicians recognized the audiences comics now have. The booming return for live in general seems even more acute for comics, many of whom took advantage of their off-stage time in the pandemic to grow their audiences through social media. Instagram Reels and TikTok clips made new fans all without the rigors of the road.

And when it was time to open the clubs, top comedians found nary an empty seat.

Consider this: in 2022, the top 25 grossing comics on Pollstar's charts grossed a combined $387.2 million on 5.16 million tickets. In 2024, the top 25 grossed nearly $200 million more: $582.7 million on more than 7 million tickets.

And in a year where comedy's political salience was proved, funnily enough the biggest fish was one who is famously non-political.

Nate Bargatze — the naifish, Nashville native aw-shucksher who soared from theaters to arenas on his "Be Funny Tour" — was the year's top draw, bringing in nearly $80 million, besting second-place Dave Chappelle by more than $35 million.

The obscenity-free funnyman hosted "Saturday Night Live" twice, launched a production company for comics in a similar oeuvre and announced his next tour, which will continue bringing him to North American arenas while also giving him a foothold in Europe.

Oh and his beloved Vanderbilt Commodores upset then-No. 1 Alabama on the gridiron.

Not a bad year (don't ask him how his Tennessee Titans and Nashville Predators are doing, though; even a clean comic's limits can be tested).

The proliferation of streaming, social media and podcasting has accelerated the career velocity of a working comic and changed the calculus. It's still hard work, of course, but an act can go from complete unknown treading the boards at his local club to record-setting sell-out at the Hollywood Bowl in relatively short order, as Matt Rife did on the back of viral crowd-work clips on Instagram.

Though working, touring comics have always existed to varying levels of success, more and more are finding that touring is an end to itself instead of a step on the way to breaking big with a television sitcom or in film.

And because the new math gives comics the ability to reach an audience anytime, anywhere, building a fanbase as rabid and dedicated as a pop star, they no longer can be pigeonholed as the court jesters skewering the powerful and humorously noting their shortcomings (though this was and is and will continue to be a vital role for comedians to play).

Now they are increasingly the ones who the powerful need to court themselves.

ASM, Music Venue Trust Join Forces For Grassroots

ASM Global announced it is expanding its partnership with the UK's Music Venue Trust (MVT), and pledged "continued support for grassroots music venues around the country," according to a press release announcing the new support scheme.

From December, ASM Global and its portfolio of UK venues will work side by side with the MVT, "to raise awareness and vital funds to protect and sustain the future of grassroots music venues, and in turn the UK's complete live music ecosystem, celebrating the artist pathway from first show to arena sell-out," the partnership announcement continues.

ASM Global first announced its commitment to MVT in 2023.

Indie Festivals Pass 1M Milestone

The total ticketed capacity of members of the UK's Association of Independent Festivals has reached more than 1 million, the organization announced.

The exact ticket capacity of all AIF members was 1,150,945, the association stated, adding, that the milestone marked "a tremendous rise from the Association of Independent Festivals' humble beginning in 2008, when five festival organizers put aside their differences and began talking about issues affecting the independent festival community."

Since then, the AIF has grown to 146 UK independent festival promoters. It is now an "influential force both within the music industry and in front of the country's policy makers, as it stands up for the needs and interests of those working in this vital cultural and economic sector," by its own admission.

Despite the growth of AIF, the actual number of festivals staged in the UK has been falling at a dramatic rate. At the end of November, as part of ongoing analysis of the sector's health, AIF warned that 72 festivals have now announced a postponement, cancellation or complete closure in 2024 – double the amount of 2023.

AEG Presents, MCT Agentur Announce Partnership

AEG Presents has taken an undisclosed stake in German promoter and agency MCT Agentur, the company of Scumeck Sabottka.

It's a deal that extends the reach of both companies, creating "a strategic alignment in Germany and beyond," according to a press release.

Scumeck Sabottka founded MCT in 1984 in Herne, in the German state of North Rhine-Westphalia together with two friends. The independent concert and tour promoter moved to Berlin in 1999, gaining recognition across the country, as well as wider Europe.

Over three decades, the business has grown the careers of international, as well as some national acts by taking them through the circuit.

ILMC 37 Launches Conference Agenda

This year's ILMC theme revolves around seafaring, with the conference to "explore 'current' affairs, plumb the depths of the business, and chart the new waves of headliners, as they navigate the ever-changing seas of the live music industry."

The conference agenda for ILMC 37, which returns to the Royal Lancaster Hotel, London, Feb. 25-28, 2025, has been launched, boasting "the largest-ever program in the event's history," according to a press release.

Sessions range from touring and festivals to wellness, question times and keynotes. "One focus of the conference outline," the press release continues, "is a greater emphasis on cross-cutting issues."

One example of this is a session on Feb. 26 on the hot topic of ticket pricing, called "Pricing The Ticket: Balancing expectations," which will feature promoters, agents, ticketing companies, and venues discussing the difficult issue of price setting.

On Thursday, Feb. 27, a new Question Time session will see top industry leaders tackle questions submitted by conference delegates, moderated by Emporium Presents' Dan Steinberg.

ILMC will also convene its own fan focus group, so the industry can hear directly from regular gig-goers in a session dubbed Meet The Fans.

Another new element, Middle East Live supported by Oak View Group (Pollstar's parent company), sees two dedicated sessions – a state of the nation review and venue focus – focused on this rapidly expanding region for the live music industry, as well as surrounding networking elements.

ILMC's 2025 Hotseat interview will be with Superstruct co-founder James Barton. Other conference topics across the three-day event include ethics & activism;

Senior Moves At Frontier, Live Performance Australia

Frontier Touring and Live Performance Australia unveiled key changes in their executive teams.

Mary Bainbridge, a Frontier veteran of near-50 years, is stepping down full time end of the year, and will consult through to June 2025.

Born in the UK, she joined Mushroom agency Premier Artists in 1977 before moving to become right-hand person of late founder Michael Gudinski, exerting great power although she generally stayed out of the limelight.

She was a key figure in Ed Sheeran, Madonna, Foo Fighters, Bryan Adams, Paul McCartney, the Police, Guns N Roses, Eagles, Taylor Swift, Billy Joel, Rod Stewart, Bruce Springsteen and Kylie Minogue tours.

Frontier CEO Dion Brant hailed her as a mentor to the group and "as legendary as the most iconic of artists that Frontier tours. With close to 50 years of experience she has arguably seen and done it all."

Eric Lassen takes over January as chief executive of Live Performance Australia, peak body for the live arts and entertainment industry.

Taking over from Evelyn Richardson after 18 years, he was CEO of PayPal Australia and SVP and deputy general counsel for Live Nation Entertainment, and served on not-for-profit boards, including Music Forward Foundation.

Live Demand Rises But Warning To Sector

Australians continue to support live music events, but have strong ideas about what is needed to improve their experience.

In a sample of 1,001 people, up to 64% will attend one in the next six months, according to stadium and resort developer Winarch Group's second Australian Live Music Census.

Attendance could lift if grievances were addressed such as cheaper ticket prices (according to 74%), more venues closer to where they live (50%) and better designed for live music, and cheaper booking fees (41%).

Inadequate transport was of high concern, rising to 48% in the 18-24 age group. The biggest frustration at shows concerned toilet queues at 59%, rising to 67% for women.

Australians support a wide variety of events and genres. Sixty percent attend indoor ticketed concerts, 56% free events or concerts, 39% ticketed outdoor concerts,

Eden Park Gets 12 Concerts A Year

Auckland's 50,000-seat Eden Park received permission from Auckland Council to double the number allowed for concerts a year to 12. Chief executive Nick Sautner called it "a landmark moment for Auckland and New Zealand's entertainment scene" and encourage more international acts to include the country on their global tours.

Most recently, Coldplay played three sellouts to 160,000 fans, with an estimated NZ$20 million ($11.8 million) boost for Auckland.

The council's community consultation for the increased concerts drew 2,000 submissions with 94% agreeing. The shows come with strong noise conditions and a curfew of 11:30 p.m.

NewJeans Has NoName At First Show Since Ador Split

Earlier this month, K-pop girl group NewJeans announced it has terminated its contract with management company Ador. On Dec. 7, the group made its first concert appearance since the announcement, which has shaken the Korean music industry.

The five members appeared as guest performers at the Korean concert of the Japanese duo Yoasobi, which has garnered a huge following throughout Asia. NewJeans performed several of its hits and members introduced themselves as individuals without ever mentioning the name of the group.

In addition, "NewJeans" was not displayed on stage or on screens, nor was the group's logo shown. The only mention came from Yoasobi themselves, who briefly referred to the group by name.

According to K-pop fansite Kbizoom, the news spread quickly on Korean social media, pointing out that in the wake of breaking their contract with Ador, NewJeans would seem to be up in the air as to whether or not they can use the name, which is obviously controlled by Ador.

At least one fan asked, "Do we now have to call them AKA NewJeans?" The appearance has sparked speculation about how the group will handle their future commitments and the most common scenario is that, at least in the short term, the members will simply operate as individuals rather than as a unit.

Ador continues to state that its contract with the group "is still valid" and has filed a lawsuit against them. In addition, the Korea Entertainment Producers Association and the Korea Management Federation have released statements demanding that NewJeans resume normal activities by retracting their decision to terminate their contract.

HONG KONG

Social Flops At Clockenflap

After Scottish DJ SimOne complained about teenage boys making "obscene hand gestures" during her performance at Hong Kong's Clockenflap 2024, the South China Morning Post ran an article on Dec. 4 outlining other problems with the festival that "cast Hong Kong...in a bad light."

The article quotes social media posts from festivalgoers who complained about people moving to the front of the stage in an aggressive manner and cutting lines to get into venues.

There were also complaints about the "heavy police presence" on the grounds, including plainclothes officers who were constantly patrolling the festival, obviously concentrating more on political activity than the bad behavior that was so evident.

One Japanese band remarked from the stage "freedom for Hong Kong people," thus prompting the SCMP to wonder if the group will ever be allowed in Hong Kong or China again.

Also, there were reports that St. Vincent attempted to crowd surf during her performance but that some audience members tried to pull her down into the pit. In any case, it didn't seem to faze the musician, since she later praised Hong Kong as one of the best cities in the world.

Nevertheless, when she tried to thank the audience in their own language, she used Mandarin instead of Cantonese, the language spoken in Hong Kong, and the well-intentioned gesture was met with a cold response.

To add insult to injury the lead singer of the Canadian rock band Mother Mother told the crowd how happy they were to be there for "our first time in Japan." At least he corrected himself shortly afterwards.

RED WINE SUPERNOVA: No artist made quite an impression this year like Chappell Roan, who burst onto the scene and quickly made headline-grabbing appearances at major festivals like Chicago's Lollapalooza and Outside Lands in the Bay Area. The rising star is pictured performing her "Midwest Princess Tour" at the Brixton Academy on Sept. 21, 2024, in London.

The GLOBAL CONCERT PULSE ranks each artist by average boxoffice gross based on data reported within the last three months. All figures in U.S. dollars. Please note the validity of averages increases with the number of shows reported and we highly recommend a review of the underlying data with an ARTIST TOUR HISTORY report before making any local booking assumptions. To report box office or upcoming shows, please visit pollstar.com and access the "Report" menu.
